

Position: Assistant Professor-Forest Ecology

Description:

The School of Forestry and Wildlife Sciences at Auburn University invites applications for a tenure-track faculty position at the assistant professor level in forest ecology with an expected start date of August 1, 2020. This is a full time, tenure track, 9-month appointment with a 60% research, 35% teaching and 5% service. The SFWS is a leading school in the nation and has played an active role in forestry, wildlife, natural resource management, geospatial and environmental informatics, and biomaterial and packaging education, research, and outreach. Our graduates are leaders in a diverse array of natural resources-related companies, agencies, and non-profit organizations. Additional information about the School of Forestry and Wildlife Sciences and its programs can be found at our website:

Qualifications:

An earned doctoral degree with at least one degree in forestry/natural resources management (or equivalent experience) is required at the time employment begins. Applicants should demonstrate strong training/experience in the broad field of forest ecology. Multidisciplinary, multiscale (organism, community, landscape) research in both applied and theoretical aspects of forest ecology, university teaching experience, and demonstrated record of scholarly publication and extramural funding are highly desirable. The candidate selected for this position must be able to meet eligibility requirements to work in the United States at the time employment begins and must be able to communicate effectively in English.

Responsibilities: The successful applicant will be expected to establish an extramurally funded, innovative research program focused on process and function of forest ecosystems. The applicant will also be expected to teach two undergraduate courses each year and one graduate course in alternate years in the areas of the applicant's specialty or as needed within the curricula. Additional responsibilities include recruiting and mentoring graduate students, advising undergraduate students, and participating in School and university service.

Rank and Salary: Commensurate with qualifications and experience.

Application Procedures: Applicants must complete the on-line application at this link:

<http://aufacultypositions.peopleadmin.com/postings/4084> to include a complete biographical resume, transcripts, statement of teaching and research philosophies, and the names and contact information of three references. The review date will begin March 31, 2020 and will continue until a suitable candidate has been identified.
